

INTERNATIONAL DAY FOR DISASTER REDUCTION

13TH OCTOBER, 2011

समर्थ २०११

आपदा जोखिम न्यूनिकरण हेतु जन जागरूकता अभियान

Mass Awareness Campaign for Disaster Reduction

PREFACE

The consequences of environmental deterioration and haphazard development have caused an unprecedented rise in the frequency and magnitude of disasters all over the world. Scientific findings endorse that human-induced faults enhance the risk of disasters, resulting in enormous loss of lives and property. While disasters affect everyone in the same way, the vulnerable groups- especially children, face the brunt of disasters with more severity and trauma. Factors such as their age affect their vulnerability and shape their ability to cope and survive in a disaster context.

Children have particular needs that must be met for their healthy growth and development. Aside from physical threat to life, experiences of fear, violence, separation from parents and caregivers, exploitation and abuse are threats to their well-being and development. Aside from being killed or injured, the loss of livelihood of their families can lead to homelessness and extreme poverty. Exposure to disaster can be a traumatic experience for children, affecting future full development potential.

Underpinning the critical need of children's and youth's participation in the disaster risk reduction, the 'United Nations International Strategy for Disaster Reduction Secretariat (UNISDR)' has decided to mark the International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction with focus on Children and Young People. The celebrations of the IDDRR 2011 shall be aptly echoed by a slogan- “Step Up for Disaster Risk Reduction”. The specific objectives of the IDDRR 2011 are as under-

- To let the world know that children and young people are partners in reducing disaster risk.
- To promote more partnerships with children and young people in disaster risk reduction
- To connect and build bridges and understanding among children and young people

As a symbol of solidarity with the global efforts to make the IDDRR 2011 a success, the Himachal Pradesh State Disaster Management Authority (HPSDMA) plans to organize a series of events starting from 8th of October 2011 (6th anniversary of the Kashmir Earthquake) to 13th of October 2011 (International Day for Disaster Risk Reduction 2011).
